THE MARKETS

There seems to be a market today for wheat at 70 cents and oats at 32 cents. At least, one of the mills is buying today on this basis. But trading is slow and very few of the farmers are waiting and this seems to be the story of wheat all over the state.

The egg market is stronger and now candled No. 1 are worth 27 cents cash. There is a general feeling in egg circles that another week will bring a 30-cent price as the Portland market is strong.

Portland, Ore., Sept. 14.—Reports from Willamette valley hop yards are very much mixed regarding the output this season. Some yards show rather liberal losses from last year, while others are showing increased output. Generally speaking the reports indicate a crop similar to that of a year ago.

Entire absence of demand is showing for hops at this time. Leading dealers report that brewers are not interested in the market, in fact their offers to sell even below the figures they believe the market will open at, find no response from the best markets. On every hand there is a keen desire to discover the exact size of the American crop and the quality available in the various sections.

According to a report from the Hop Growers' association in Neumischel, sent in by United States Consul Harry G. Selzer, from Breslau, Prussia, the hop vines are exceedingly healthy and the general outlook for a large crop is very favorable. The early varieties are in full bloom and the later varieties are just beginning to bloom.

The heavy rains during the last few days, together with continued warm weather, have been very beneficial, and a large harvest is predicted. Practically all supplies from the 1914 harvest have been exhausted.

Portland, Ore., Sept. 14.—Market for eggs is being held firm along Front street, but indications are that values will not be lifted above prevailing figures for some time, if at all this season.

Present price for eggs is at a basis where it is difficult for the average consumer to purchase freely. Beyond these figures there will be a further curtailment of demand and unless an extreme shortage in fresh offerings would aid prices in that line.

So far as cold storage stock is concerned, seemingly it would be quite wise for the speculator to unload at prevailing prices. With present prices for fresh as high as they can be placed without hurting the demand, storage goods are not likely to climb still higher.

Butter Advance in Effect.
 Advancement of 2c a pound in the price of creamery butter, action on which was reported in these reports Saturday, took effect this morning. This places city prints at 74 cents a pound. The price of butterfat is also advanced.

Big Run of Swine.
 Market for swine was under severe pressure at North Portland today with a very heavy run and killers in full control of the price situation. Today's run is even greater than last Monday when there was so much depression in the early trade.

Market for swine was generally steady this morning in the east, little change being shown in quotations.
